Fundamental

Although the WiSE system offers a novel method of administering CRT, there are currently no long-term safety statistics available for this apparatus. Only short-term adverse events, procedural difficulties, and 6-month follow-up outcomes are included in the data that is currently available. As post-procedural monitoring studies are finished, the long-term safety and efficacy profile of the WiSE device will be made public in the coming years. The WiSE device may not be used as much in clinical practice due to high procedural complications, associations with longer-term adverse events, and unfavorable morbidity and mortality data.
